Rewards Charts

Reward charts can be used to reinforce positive behaviour. The visual representation acts as a constant reminder for positive behaviour and allows children to work towards a goal.

When using rewards charts, ensure that you are consistent in your approach and that the child is aware of what is considered to be good behaviour. Creating rules and boundaries as an introduction to the behaviour chart works well. Each child will have their own behaviour goals. For some children you may need to be specific, for example eating all your dinner or completing school work and for others they will just need more generalised targets.

At times, a child can begin to display negative behaviours and it is tempting to use the rewards chart as a sanction. However, by doing this you are taking away the reward they rightfully earned at the time which can lead to them losing value and respect for the reward chart.

Below are some templates that you can use:
